County Granges Win Awards

Two Lancaster County Granges will be honored at the State Grange Convention at Harrisburg, October 25.

The granges, both slated to receive honorable mention awards and $25 in cash, were among the 40 subordinate lodges entering the Grange's 13th annual Community Service Contest

The purpose of the contest is to encourage self-help service programs in various communities throughout Pennsylvania, J. Collins McSparran, Master of the Pennsylvania organization, said.

The two Lancaster County Granges to be honored are Fulton Grange 66, of Peach Bottom R2 and Colerain Grange 1667, Kirkwood.

Beef Feeders Are Reminded Of Registration

Sign Up time for Red Rose and New Holland Baby Beef clubs is here again, County Agent, Max Smith said this week. Membership is open to boys and girls between the ages of 10 and 21 who are interested in feeding a steer calf.

Baby Beef is one of the major 4-H projects in the county Smith said. "We hope that additional members may be interested this year"

The club steers will go on feed for the 1962 Farm Show with the objectives of teaching the club members steer feeding, fitting, showing, record keeping, and the ability of getting along with other folks.

For those interested in joining the Red Rose club, Smith suggests contacting either the extension service office, 202 Post Office Building, Lancaster, or one of the following 4-H leaders: Fred Linton, Quaryville R2; Elvin Hess Jr, Strasburg R1; Jay R. Nissley, Manheim R4; Mylin R. Good, Manheim R1; Victor Longenecker, Elizabethtown R3 or Harry Showalter, South Pine Street in Ephrata.

Members in the New Holland Club should contact Kester M. Weaver, New Holland R1 or John B. Lapp, Bareville R1, or the extension service office.

Warwick FFA Repeats As Judging Champs

Repeating their performance of last year, the Warwick FFA members are now within one win of retiring the revolving trophy.

In the individual scoring, Jacob Harnish, Manheim R2, Manheim Central High School, finished the six class event with a total score of 508.3 points. His closest rival for tht individual crown was Glenn Hess, Washington Boro, Penn-Manor High School, with 503.5 points

The contest was held during the exhibition of the Lampeter Fair, but the scores were not all totaled until this week Chapter scores were obtained by adding the individual scores of all the members and dividing by the number of members participating.

Warwick won the trophy for the first time last year when they defeated Manheim heim, a previous three year winner in the event.

Following close behind Solanco in the team placings was Manheim with a total of 380.172 points per member. Pequea Valley, with a score of 366 was fourth whil Cocalico moved into fifth place with 360 25 Following were New Holland with 354.41, Penn Manor with 347 4 and Lampeter with 335 937 pts.

Demand Fair Supply Good

All areas reported production gain with supplies freely offered. Bottling demand was no more than fair.

Supplies above bottling requirements were liberal in most instances with surplus being readily channeled into manufacturing outlets and separators.

In many instances, stocks appeared to have little value, with the New York milkshed reporting distressed sales as low as $5 40 to $5 60 per 40 quart unit.

FROM WHERE WE STAND -

Garden Spot Is Widely Known

In a conversation with "out-of-state" delegates to a meeting not long ago, the subject of home towns came up. We mentioned Lancaster thinking no one would have heard of the little village we live in.

Lancaster didn't mean a thing to the others in the meeting, but later in the conversation when "Lancaster County" was mentioned, we were immediately the center of attention.

It has been that way whenever we have been in these United States. Many people can not tell you in what end of the state Philadelphia or Pittsburg is located, but they have all heard of Lancaster County.

Sometimes we wonder if the farmers of this county are aware of the unique position we hold in the agricultural community of this nation.

We wonder if the rural people of the Garden Spot are appreciative of the enviable record of production of county farms.

Lancaster County produced more dollar value in farm products last year than any other county in the United States (with the exception of one or two highly irrigated, intensively cultivated garden counties in the far west) on a land area relatively small in comparison with many western counties.

During 1959, Lancaster county farmers produced almost $130,000,000 worth of farm commodities. In doing this they put the county into first place ranking in 12 different categories among the counties in Pennsylvania.

Dairy farmers sold $23,290 worth of milk to lead the counties of the state. Cows sold brought in $22,425.000 more as the second big money makers in the county and first place rank among counties. A total of $17,837,000 came from the sale of eggs and again led the state. Cattle, other than cows, headed the state parade with another $16,087,000 for county farmers.

Tobacco, fifth big money maker for county farmers brought $15,412,000 and accounted for over 90 percent of the state production.

And so the parade goes with Lancaster County racking up first place value figures in poultry, corn, hay, wheat, silage, hogs and barley. Even in the commodities considered minor in the county, the ranking is high. Sheep and potatoes from the Garden Spot rank third among Pennsylvania counties; Apples rank eighth and peaches rank seventh.

As one countian said recently, "If you were from a foreign country and looking for a place to settle, You would want to find a place just like Lancaster County."

That sums it up pretty well.

At least that's how it looks from where we stand.

Cooperation

Sometime ago we were quite disturbed by the report that the Producers Cooperative Exchange at Coatesville would pay producers at varying rates according to the number of cases of eggs shipped per week.

The new system of pricing gave a bonus of several cents per dozen to the producers shipping a large number of eggs each week. The management of the cooperative explained that larger shipments involved less work in processing and therefore larger shippers should be given a premium.

We would like to commend the management of the cooperative for its action in returning to the former method of payment to its members.

There is but one reason for the formation of a marketing cooperative. If the individual small producer could bargain in the market place with the relatively few large buyers, there would be no reason for the formation of a cooperative.

If a cooperative discourages the participation of small producers by giving the larger producers an advantage through premiums for volume, then the organization is in danger of collapse because it is defeating the purpose for which it was organized.

A spokesman for the management said the former method of payment to producers was reinstated because of the wishes of the members. "We are a cooperative organization, and what the members decide is best, we must do.", is the way he put it.

We believe there is only one way to operate a cooperative of any kind. The wishes of the majority of members must be granted whether they are in accord with the wishes of the management or not, for after all, the cooperative must operate for the benefit of the members. That is its only reason for being.

At least that's how it looks from where we stand.

Trust In God

Lesson for October 16, 1960

CHRISTIAN religion looks different from the inside. What an outsider thinks is nonsense is seen from the inside as the highest wisdom. This is particularly true about trust in God. The non-Christian just labels this superstition, but a Christian knows very well that if he could not trust God he might as well not believe in God at all. The non-religious person classifies trust in God with trust in a rabbit's foot. But the Christian knows that there is an infinite difference between God and a rabbit's foot. One is the Maker of heaven and earth; the other only a thing, and a silly thing at that. It is high wisdom to trust in God; to trust in charms such as a rabbit's foot is not only silly; it is sinful.

Dr. Foreman

Why Trust in God?

The 121st Psalm suggests some solid reasons for trusting in the one true and living God. Trust unattached, trust by itself, trust without any one or anything to trust in—this is meaningless and may be disastrous. It isn't the trust that is the main thing. GOD is the reason for trusting God. He is the one who made heaven and earth. We have a right to believe this earth, this life, is livable, because we are confident that God made it so. God made this earth for improvement, not for destruction. (To be sure, it will be destroyed in time; but it is a sin to hasten that day.) God made heaven and earth. He knows what stresses and strains they can stand, and he does not subject them to what they cannot bear. He created man, and he knows what man can stand.

This Psalm suggests a title for God, seldom used: "Keeper of life." God's will is always first for life, not death; health, not sickness; upbuilding, not down-dragging. Life which he creates, he p

Campaign Promises

Voters with a long memory know that campaign promises, however sincerely they may be made, cannot always be carried out. The country is fortunate that some of them cannot

I attended both Presidential nominating conventions four years ago. Many promises were made by both parties which were not carried out, partly because Congress refused to vote them

Similar promises were made at the national conventions this year and are being repeated by the candidates in the campaigning for votes We are hearing a great deal of talk about "government programs" involving huge outlays of public funds to "strengthen our economy."

Federal regulations and controls follow excessive Federal spending just as night follows day I have called attention in previous columns to the fact that there are more than 3,000 Federal bureaus, commissions, and agencies in Washington with administrative authority over private business. More than half of them have been created in the past 25 years.

Danger From Within

A large number of those agencies, with a total of many thousands of employees in all parts of the world are spending billions of the U. S. taxpayers' money in both cash grants and technical aid, to build up foreign competitors to private business in this country. Many of these competitors are government-owned and controlled.

Through use of U. S. financing and cheap labor at home those countries can undersell us in many markets including those in our own country. This not only weakens our privately owned industry and agriculture but has caused many of the larger corporations to form subsidiary corporations in Europe which provide jobs for thousands of European laborers, while reducing emp'oyment within the United States.

Conservative Agriculture

This situation is not too bad at present but it would have become very serious if all of these so-called "liberal spending programs" had been put into effect.

Many spending projects were pushed by Congressmen from the large industrial cities During recent years our country has been saved from inflation and disaster that would have followed such liberal spending, simply because the agricultural areas are conservative.

The liberals have complained bitterly that the Congressmen in the Southern agriculture sections voted with the Northern conservatives and thereby prevented the enactment of the so-called "liberal" plans to spend many billions of dollars of the taxpayers' money. They are right about this.

The moral socialism at the heart of these spending programs has not appealed to the Southern representatives in Congress. The South is a basic agricultural section, in which there is a high proportion of farmers especially small farmers. Southern farmers generally, are conservative in their politics and economic beliefs

Far-sighted editors of thousands of weekly newspapers have contributed immeasurably to defeat of wasteful and dangerous spending by keeping their readers accurately informed.

Crop Summary

Yield Prospects Are Good

Harrisburg — Prospects for a bumper corn crop continue to improve with little soft corn to be harvested, the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service predicted Tuesday in the last of its weekly crop and weather summaries for this crop year.

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture based its prediction on the fact that much of the corn acreage this year was planted late and would not have reached proper maturity before being killed by frost. However, light frosts that have occurred to date have been from one to three weeks later than normal and have been heavy enough to kill corn in only a few scattered localities

Harvest of corn is increasing and during the past week northern tier county farmers started moving into the fields with corn pickers. Potato harvest in most areas is past its peak. Conditions are excellent in western and central areas, and in eastern counties the ground is dry enough on higher fields to permit potato digging.

Most fall-seeded barley is sprouted and growing normally. Wheat seeding is general and conditions are very good with the exception of the northwest where barley and wheat are emerging only in low damp spots.

Old hay stands are going into winter in fair condition and new seedings are good. The pasture season is slowly coming to an end with few pastures providing adequate good feed.

DUCKS GROW FAST

Ducks are about the fastest growing domesticated animals, reports H H Kauffman, extension poultry specialist. They weigh slightly over one-tenth of a pound when hatched and increase their original weight 60 times during the first eight weeks If the calf from a beef animal would grow in the same manner, it could weigh about 2¼ tons at eight weeks.

START SILAGE FEEDING

Richard S Adams, extension dairy specialist, suggests dairymen planning to feed grass silage should feed it early if they have a fall freshening herd. He belives amounts of both hay and silage fed shou'd be gradually increased until cows are on full-barn feeding A gradual change-over keeps stress at a minimum and helps maintain both production and health.

Five County Future Farmers Attend National Convention

Five Future Farmers and one teacher of Vocational Agriculture participated in the 33rd annual convention of the Future Farmers of America this week in Kansas City.

Reveiving the only American Farmer Degree awarded to Lancaster County this year was Robert Book, 21-year old farmer of Lancaster R7.

George W. Myers, Book's former teacher of vocational agriculture at Lampeter - Strasburg High School, received the honorary American Farmer Degree

In winning the honorary title, Myres became the first county teacher to be so honored Book, in winning the highest degree in FFA work takes his place among the selected few (one in each 1,000 membership in the organization) who have won the honor for their leadership ability and farming programs during high school and the first three years after leaving high school.

Representing Pennsylvania as official delegate to the convention was Gerald Greiner, Manheim R4, immediate past president of the state association of FFA.

Dean Hoffer, Manheim R3, former Pennsylvania FFA president assisted in the presentation of the degrees in his official capacity of national regional vice president

Donald Trimble represented the Keystone state in the capacity of State reporter.

The only countian winning a berth on the state judging teams was Dennis Sangrey, Conestoga R2. Sangrey won the right to the trip when he turned in one of the three top scores in the livestock judging contest at The Pennsylvania State University in June.

Full-tang construction means that the metal goes the full length of the handle, with two or three rivets holdi the handle to the tang half-tang construction, t tang is inserted in a which extends at least third of the length of t hand e and is fastened curely with at least one r et.
